What is Cleft Lip & Palate (CLP)?

Cleft Lip and/or Palate (CLP) is a common congenital condition where parts of the upper lip and/or the roof of the mouth fail to fuse properly during fetal development.

What is Cleft Lip & Palate (CLP)?

CLP is a birth defect where the upper lip or roof of the mouth doesn't form properly during early pregnancy, affecting appearance, feeding, speech, and breathing. It occurs in about 1 in 700 births globally, with higher rates in Asians and lower rates in Africans.

Caused by a mix of genetic and environmental factors—like maternal illness, smoking, or poor nutrition—CLP often goes untreated in low-income countries due to lack of awareness and access to care. Early detection and surgical intervention greatly improve the quality of life.
